THE MARKET TROUBLES.

Action of the Market Company.

The trouble between the Washington Market Company and the dealers continues to grow in intensity. Considerable feeling is shown on both sides. No Sale To-Day.

The announcement of the sale of the stalls in the Centre Market at 11 o'clock this morning did not attract many people. In fact, when Mr.W.E.Chandler and Mr. Thomas Dowling, the auctioneer, started out to select a spot to senduct the sale on hidders could be seen, and If was then decided to postpone the sale until half-past 11. An occupied stand, near the middle entrance of the Seventh street wing, was chosen from which to conduct the sale.

He Enters a Plea of Not Guilly.

"I see, your Honor, in my absence yesterday," and District Attorney Corkhill to Justice Cox, in the Criminal Court this morning, "that you have set aside the forgetiure of the bond of Capt, Howgate?"

"Yes," answered his Honor, "I found that the bond was a general one."

Col. Corkhill said that he did not care anything about the Commissioner's bond. What he wanted was Capt. Howgate brought in and held by a bond of the court. The one from the Commissioner did not amount to anything. This bond, already given, could not be forfeited, as it is held until December next. He thought it was an ordinary one, but had be examined it and seen that it differed in terms from the common bond he would not have asked for its forfeiture. The counsel for Capt.
